U.S. Probation Officer Action:

On January 17, 2003, Turner commenced his four year term of supervised release. This officer went over the conditions of supervision with Turner in detail. Turner indicated he understood the conditions, including the restitution order, and signed the conditions. This officer set up a pay agreement with Turner for him to pay $10 a month, which represented his best possible effort, based on his financial situation at the time.

During the term of supervision, Turner was essentially cooperative and compliant. He paid his $100 special assessment in full as of November 1, 2004. Additionally, he paid $190 towards his restitution balance as of March 6, 2006. In examining his financial situation, Turner has struggled due to the fact that he went through periods of unemployment and underemployment especially between March 2006 and November 2006, due to medical problems. He only returned to work within the last three to four weeks. Thus, he has few assets and does not have excess cash available to pay the restitution. Turner will continue making payments throughout the balance of supervision. It is this officer's opinion that Turner made his best, good faith effort to satisfy the Court's order of restitution. This officer has notified the Financial Litigation Unit of the U.S. Attorney's Office and the victim of the situation. Based on the provisions of 18 U.S.C. § 3613(b), the offender will be legally obligated to pay restitution to the victim in this case up to 20 years after sentencing, which occurred on January 17, 2003. Thus, the offender will be legally mandated to pay restitution until January 2023.

Therefore, based on Turner's cooperation and effort, along with the above legal remedy to obtain the balance of restitution, this officer is respectfully recommending that no action be taken against Turner for failure to pay restitution, and to allow him to discharge as scheduled on January 16, 2007.
